

From big bills to iron bars

Wilmington Police put the cuffs on alleged con artist

WILMINGTON - Last Wednesday night police arrested a suspect when he fled the Market Basket store after attempting a flim-flam scheme. A flim-flam usually targets store cashiers and generally involves the purchase of an inexpensive item with a large denomination, commonly a $50 or $100 bill. As the cashier starts to return the change, the suspect acts confused and claims they meant to use a smaller bill, and then presents additional money to re-acquire the large bill. A good flim-flam artist can usually scam a cashier out of $50 or more dollars in a very short period of time unless the cashier is aware of the scheme.

Just over a week ago Wilmington Police became aware of an individual who was suspected of this conducting this activity in several cities and towns as far away as Maynard and Groton. The individual was also suspected of targeting the Market Basket stores in Billerica. Groton Police had tentatively identified a suspect and Wilmington Police provided a photo of that individual to the Market Basket store in Wilmington.

Shortly after 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday night, Wilmington Market Basket store employees recognized the individual as he approached the courtesy booth and attempted to make a small purchase with a $100 bill. As WILMINGTON - The message to residents of Wilmington is loud and clear; when it comes to draining excess water, do not put it into the streets or onto adjacent properties.

Earlier in March when heavy rains melted away deep piles of snow, the Wilmington Police Department responded to numerous complaints of water being pumped into the streets.

Police officers on patrol found additional water pumping incidents through the telltale hose often put out to the street to drain water.

This is in direct violation of Wilmington Town By-Laws Chapter 5, Section 18 that states: "WATER DISCHARGE. No owner of a building abutting upon or adjacent to the line of any street shall cause, permit

Tickets for Wilmington Middle School production going fast

WILMINGTON - Sixty Wilmington Middle School students have been hard at work

since the first January casting calls to put together the musical production of "Aladdin, Jr.," which will take the stage this week.

On Monday afternoon they hit the stage in full costume for the first of two full run-through dress rehearsals scheduled to take place before opening night on Thursday. Everyone took a place on stage and Co-Director Chris Desjardins led students through some vocal, physical and energy/morale boosting warm-up exercises before the run through.

The lights went down, everyone hit their places and Desjardins played the piano for the opening "Arabian Nights" number. Five singer/narrators took the stage in front of the rest of the ensemble and through a combination of singing and speaking they introduced the major charac-

A look back at Wilmington of yesteryear...

From slave to published author

America's first author of African heritage lived in Wilmington

By LARZ F. NEILSON

WILMINGTON - The most famous person to live in Wilmington in the Revolutionary War era was a young black woman of whom the town has no records.

Phillis Wheatley was the first person of African heritage to publish a book in the English language. Her book, Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, was a sensation when published in 1772. Only 19, she became the toast of society on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

She was born in western Africa in 1753 in what is now the nation of Senegal. At age seven, she was kidnapped and transported to Boston where she was sold into slavery. In July 1761, she was bought by John Wheatley, a Boston tailor and merchant who lived near the State House.

As a personal servant, she was in a close relationship with members of the Wheatley family. Under their tutelage, she accepted Christianity. The Wheatleys' daughter Mary was credited with teaching her to read, and she soon learned to write, through observation. Her capacity for learning was amazing, and she soon learned Greek and Latin.

Her first published poem, "On Messrs. Hussey and Coffin" was published in the Newport (RI) Mercury in 1767.

It's Your Money

by Joyce Brisbois

WHAT IF YOU CAN'T PAY YOUR TAXES

Were your taxes underwithheld last year? Did you make more investment income than you estimated? If your tax bill calls for more cash than you have, there are options. The bill must be paid, but there are different ways to do it.

One way is to arrange with the Internal Revenue Service to pay over time, perhaps as long as five years. It's wise to apply early online, even before the tax deadline, using Form 9465, Installment Agreement Request. But be aware that it costs $105 to set up the agreement, or $52 if you let the IRS debit payments out of your bank account. Low-income folks pay $43. Interest and penalties are about 11 percent on the unpaid balance.

It may be more advantageous to get the money elsewhere. A home-equity loan, for instance, has a much lower interest rate, and it might be deductible. Most vital, of course, get your return filed on time and save the 5-percent-a-month penalty on a late return. When you need real tax help, see the real tax professionals:

Lowell Five's 'Keep it Local' rewards program

March 28th in Tewksbury and Wilmington

LOWELL - Robert A. Caruso, Chairman of The Lowell Five Cent Savings Bank, is pleased to announce the expansion of the Bank's Keep it Local Rewards Program. First launched in Downtown Lowell in February, the Program is designed to reward Lowell Five customers for frequenting participating local businesses. On March 28th and 29th, the program will run for the first time in Tewksbury and Wilmington.

Currently, the program is being launched in individual communities throughout the Merrimack Valley on select weekends. Customers who visit participating establishments receive 5% back on purchases made with a Lowell Five debit card. Rewards are credited to the customer's Lowell Five account once the transaction is processed by the merchant.

"We launched the program with the goal of building a rewards program that was rooted in the local community. We are extremely pleased with how it has been embraced by both our business partners and customers," said Caruso.

The program has been held twice in Downtown Lowell, and has expanded to include a variety of retail partners. For the Tewksbury and Wilmington launch, participating businesses include: A Beautiful Day Hair Studio, Anastasia's Curtains and Gifts, Aubuts Liquors, Balance Spa, Caprizzo Hair Design, Colonial Park Liquors, Cusano's Italian Kitchen, Hair N Now, Mobil on the Run (Wilmington), Piccadilly Pub (Tewksbury), Scampi's Seafood Restaurant, Stadium Liquor Mart, Touch of Elegance Salon, Tranquility Therapeutic Massage, and Tuk Tuk Restaurant. Upcoming weekends are scheduled for April 11th and 12th in Dracut and Tyngsboro, and April 25th and 26th in Westford and Pepperell. Participating businesses are included in advertisements and promotional materials featuring the program. Restaurants and retailers interested in becoming a Lowell Five Partner in Business can get more information on Lowell Five's website.

"I'm excited to participate in the Keep it Local program. Lowell Five is promoting my business and rewarding their customers for shopping here. Why wouldn't I want to be a part of this?" said Joe Aubut, owner of Aubuts Liquors in Tewksbury.

"This is only the beginning of the Keep it Local Program," said Caruso. "We are regularly adding additional business partners, as well as new dates and locations. Our goal is to grow the program to a point where we can offer ongoing rewards throughout all of the communities we serve."

Egg-streme success

Dear Editor:

On Saturday, March 22, 2008, the Recreation Department sponsored the 37th Annual Easter Egg Hunt. Volunteers and Recreation Staff blanketed the Town Common with candy-filled eggs. When the signal sounded, children ages 6 and under rushed to fill their baskets. In addition to the excitement of "hunting" eggs, children could have found a numbered egg to redeem for a special prize.

We estimate attendance at 1,100, which included approximately 650 children. The success of an event of this size requires the support of many residents and organizations within town. Special thanks to CVS, Dunkin' Donuts at 195 Main Street, Dunkin' Donuts at 321 Main Street, Everett Lodge of the International Order of Odd Fellows, Rotary Club, Shriners, Sons of Italy, Tewksbury Wilmington Elks #2070, Wilmington Department of Public Works, Wilmington Police Department and Wilmington Public Buildings Department for their generous donations.

We would also like to thank the dedicated volunteers who filled 7,000 eggs with candy, and the volunteers that came to the Town Common to scatter the eggs for eager young children to collect. We extend heartfelt thanks to the Easter Bunny who came all the way to Wilmington to welcome children and pose for photos.

Thank you to everyone who helped to make this event a memorable one.

Sincerely yours,
Deborah Cipriani

A Time to Learn

"Stop setting limits for your young child. Let her enjoy herself, she will have plenty of time to conform and be responsible." Many parents feel life is demanding enough, why put restrictions on a young child? Many parents don't realize teaching proper behavior at a young age will prevent much heartache later. The most precious and effective time to teach is right at the beginning. Teaching the proper lessons while children can absorb so much will usually last a lifetime. The wrong messages could also have the same results.

Some parents are so involved in the health and education of their child they forget the importance of proper character training. Precious years can pass before they may realize its importance. Each day that passes, the child is exposed to a learning process. However, are these lessons going to add to her or his life? Every little thing we do affects the child. They are silently developing traits and characteristics that the parents are projecting.

Little things we parents do leave their mark. Just allowing the child to help you teaches him he has something to offer; he is a contributor. He now receives praise, a thank you, and recognition for being responsible. Every time you set limits, your child is learning to conform. As a parent your words and actions should be the same to insure proper behavior. Confusion is the last thing a child needs while learning about life. This everyday interaction between parent and child has important consequences. Constant repetition will influence any human being. The child's way of thinking is being formed. His values and direction are producing a unique individual. Teaching the child improperly would have the same profound effect, producing an irresponsible or uncaring child.

What the child is exposed to will surely contribute to his future actions. Giving your child everything while she gives nothing in return is acceptable with an infant, but as she gets older your love could change to resentment, if that continues. This could also affect her relations with peers and adults. Because of her misinformed childhood she must now suffer rejection and the loss of friends.

Allowing your child to disrupt family gatherings is another injustice to the child. It takes away the closeness and love family members want to give. This disruptive behavior can be seen in restaurants where a child goes wild; jumping, screaming, banging on a booth that is occupied by strangers. This causes much discomfort for those who are seeking quiet and comfort and a night out. Some parents are oblivious to the situation or don't give a damn. Once again, because of the parents' improper teaching, the child loses. He is looked upon as a brat that people want to get away from.

This could all happen because the parent has forgotten how to use the word NO. This word is a safety net that prevents the continuation of unacceptable behavior. It sets limits to actions that could save the child from physical harm and verbal confrontations. "No" may have a negative connotation, but it is a must that has a positive effect. Children will hear "no" for the rest of their lives, so teach them how to accept it now.

If you're concerned about your child's education, don't be. If you're preparing him by your everyday positive interaction, you are developing all the necessary ingredients for success. Teaching your child to be responsible, to conform, and how to build self-esteem will surely build a foundation for his education.

Infants and young children absorb more knowledge at their young age than any other time. Don't allow this precious time to pass. You will never find a better time to teach, and mold your child into a positive individual.

A vote for Ron Hall

To the Editor:

I urge the voters of Tewksbury to support Ron Hall, in the April 5th election, for a position on the Board of Selectmen.

In recent years our town has seen many changes and has started to look beyond our usual solutions to complex problems. As a member of our Planning Board, I can say, this has not been an easy journey.

When I consider voting for a candidate, someone who has a keen knowledge of Municipal government and who is willing to consider innovative ideas, is always my choice. There is a spark of light that shines every now and then, when such a candidate puts himself in the running.

Knowing Ron Hall for the past 4 years and working with him on a number of committees, I have learned that Ron is that person. Although Ron is very knowledgeable, I have seen him, many times, resolve an issue after much careful thought and research about whatever the objective is.

This rare quality is what our town needs, if we are to move forward in the right direction. Ron is currently the Chairman of our Finance Committee and works on several other committees. He has pledged a long-term commitment of service to our town as he continues to be very serious about the present and future quality of life in our community.

I proudly endorse Ron Hall for Selectmen. He is our best choice!

Nancy Reed

A vote for Doug Sears

Dear Editor,

Town Election Day is Saturday, April 5th. It is time to consider which candidate for selectman will best represent the people of Tewksbury. Doug Sears is the candidate that understands that we cannot spend our way into prosperity.

Doug Sears gets it. We voters don't want an override that adds 22%+ to our real estate tax bill. Enough is enough! The Town Manager already has $80,000,000 to run the town with next year. Doug Sears believes Tewksbury can manage to live within that amount.

Doug Sears has the vision and the management skills to work with the other selectmen to lead the town toward solvency. He has the skills necessary to lead our town government away from attempting to spend its way into poverty - or eventually, state receivership.

Doug Sears believes Tewksbury should be run like an $80,000,000 business. After all, that's what it is! You would not allow inefficiencies, duplications, or a driven agenda to drag down the bottom line in a private business where you are a stockholder! My friends, we are stockholders!

Doug Sears understands that many of the proposals in the Task Force Report require federal or state legislative action, and are outside of local control; and, that certain efficiencies can be made sooner than later on the town level without an override and new fees.

Doug Sears favors municipal employees joining the state employees' health, retirement, and workers' compensation systems; stopping sewer expansion when current contracts are completed; privatizing wherever savings can be met; selling parcels of town owned land to abutters to return tax title land to tax rolls.

Doug Sears understands that Tewksbury's taxpayers can no longer afford business as usual. Municipal and school employees must prepare to make more significant financial sacrifices before asking taxpayers to dig deeper into their wallets to fund their services.

Doug Sears is not afraid to lead and he will stand up and fight for the changes that we all hope for. April 5th is the "Stockholder's Meeting" for the Town. Your vote for Doug Sears for Selectman is a vote to get Tewksbury moving again toward prosperity.

Fitness IQ

What works and what to avoid - just my two cents...

Some of you reading this may have decided to join the "Wilmington's Biggest Loser" contest. Even if you did not, many of you just KNOW you are going to have to start doing some regular exercise soon or pay the consequences later. Either way, when it comes time to start moving, you will need advice on exactly what to do when you get to the gym.

What exercises really work and what exercises are a waste of time? Clearly, there will be some disagreement on a specific list, but there are some simple rules you can apply to help you decide what to include in your program.

Rule 1 - Always have a program! Working out without a program is like cooking without a recipe - especially when you have not been in the kitchen for about 10 or 20 years. Get a routine from a certified trainer (preferably NSCA or NASM) or seek out the new ActivTrax system that writes programs for you based upon a specific set of test results.

Rule 2 - Always warm up. As a rule, you should not touch a weight until you have a light sweat working. Once you start sweating, you can be fairly certain your joints and muscles are warm, your core body temperature is on the way up and your nervous system is ready to go.

Rule 3 - Go for movements giving you the most "bang for the buck." This means that you should stick with exercises requiring your entire body to move. These are also called

"compound" movements because more than one joint is involved. Moving on your feet with resistance of some sort is better than standing still. Standing still is better than sitting and of course, sitting in the gym is better than sitting at home!

Examples: Use movements that require the largest muscles in the body such as the quads, glutes, lats and shoulders. Exercises like squats, walking lunges while holding dumbbells, deadlifts and overhead pressing are more useful than static machine-based movements. Place movements like arm curls, leg curls and tricep kickbacks at the end of the routine, where they belong. This way, you can cut them out if you are pressed for time. Go for the "steak" not just the sizzle!

Rule 4 - Remember the idea of "economy of time." This is closely related to the idea of getting the most "bang for your buck." Most folks are lucky to get to the gym at all, so when you are there, you need to execute movements that will provide you the best return on your time investment. Ideally, these movements should translate to actions you might have to do the rest of your life. Movements that involve dragging, throwing, carrying or picking things up from the ground are excellent. In addition using a complete range of motion for any given muscle will provide better return than partial range movements.

Examples: Doing step-ups or dragging a sled is better than a sitting on a leg press machine. Standing barbell presses are better than seated chest presses on a machine. Throwing a medicine ball into a wall is superior to a seated abdominal machine and far better than lying on the ground doing crunches.

Rule 5 - ...and this is a big one! When doing cardiovascular exercise, use interval based patterns and not a steady paced program. This means you need to push the pace for say 30 seconds and then back off for about 60 seconds and repeat that pattern for a minimum of 20 minutes per session. This pattern has been shown to increase the fat burning effect of your cardio workout. In fact, there is some research out there showing that people who run or use any cardio machine at a steady pace for a long period of time may actually lower their ability to burn calories during exercise. The human body is very good at adapting to exercise. If you don't keep things interesting, your nervous system ceases to provide much of a response.

Most of the activities I am talking about here employ what has been called "functional training." This is one of the more common buzzwords in the fitness industry and has spawned multiple companies manufacturing machines that require the users to get on their feet and move like they would in the real world. When you think about it, it is hard to argue with the logic.

So, as I usually say, get on your feet, throw, drag, carry and lift, but get out there. Remember, you will be required to put on shorts, tee shirts or even bathing suits before you know it! Don't get caught off guard. Good luck!

Remember, if you have any fitness-related questions, you can go to www.askone.com and enter them there. I will get back to you right away and may even use your question here!

Mass Dept. of Elementary and Secondary Education

Tewksbury Schools programs to be reviewed

TEWKSBURY - Dr. Christine McGrath, Superintendent of the Tewksbury Public Schools was recently informed by the Commissioner of Education of an upcoming Department of Elementary and Secondary Education Coordinated Program Review. As part of this Coordinated Program Review, Department staff will visit the district during the week of April 28, 2008. Such visits are routinely conducted by the Department to satisfy federal and state requirements for the periodic review of specific education programs and services in schools throughout the Commonwealth. The Department is reviewing several programs during a single visit in order to use Department and school staff's time most efficiently and to encourage strong connections among the programs.

The Department's Coordinated Program Review will address the following programs English Language Education and Special Education. After reviewing school district procedures for these programs, a Department of Elementary and Secondary Education team will make its onsite visit, during which it will review individual student records, interview administrators, teachers and parents, and observe instructional sites. After the onsite visit it will prepare a report for the Superintendent and School Committee with detailed findings for each program.

Using a scale of ratings ranging from "Commendable" to

"Not Implemented," the report will rate the implementation of each requirement reviewed by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. Where requirements are found less than substantially implemented, the district must propose to the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education corrective action to bring those areas into compliance with statutes and regulations. Districts and schools are encouraged to incorporate the corrective action into their district and school improvement plans and professional development plan. The school district (or charter school) may request technical assistance from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education to develop a corrective action plan. Both the Department's report and the corrective action plan are public information and will be available to the public upon request. Program Review Final Reports are also available on the Department's Internet website at <http://www.doe.mass.edu/pqa/review/cpr/reports>.

Any member of the public may request to be interviewed by telephone by a member of the Department's visiting team. Those wishing to be interviewed should call the Superintendent's office at 978-640-7800 no later than April 8, 2008 to leave their name and phone number, or they may call the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education at (781) 338-3747. A member of the visiting team will contact each person desiring an interview within two weeks after the completion of the onsite visit. If an individual is not comfortable communicating in English or requires some other accommodation, the Department will make arrangements to communicate appropriately with the individual.

Dr. McGrath indicated that she is confident that the Program Review will be a useful and positive experience for staff members and that the report will be useful in planning for the continued improvement of educational services for all students.

DeRensis accepts leadership role with MMA Wilmington's Town Counsel unanimously elected

WILMINGTON - On January 12th, 2008, at the Annual Convention of the Massachusetts Municipal Association at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston, Paul DeRensis was unanimously elected to the office of Secretary of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association and member of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association board of directors.

Paul DeRensis, a partner with the law firm of Deutsch, Williams, Brooks, DeRensis & Holland, P.C., has acted as Town Counsel for Wilmington since 2003. He has been a practicing attorney for more than thirty years and has represented municipalities since 1981.

The Massachusetts Selectmen Association is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of all elected selectmen throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts founded in 1928, now celebrating its 80th anniversary, and is a member organization of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA). The MMA provides advocacy, training, publications, research and other services to municipalities, and is the only statewide organization that brings municipal officials together to establish unified policies, advocate these policies, and ensure the effective delivery of services to community residents.

"I see my election to this position as benefiting Wilmington because of my role as Wilmington Town Counsel," DeRensis said. "My serving in a leadership role of a statewide organization like the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association will provide better opportunities to learn from other communities ways of solving the common issues facing all communities, and will also provide a better opportunity to work, with the statewide support of other communities, towards common goals."

Editor's note: The Town Crier gives itself a "thumbs down." Regrettably, a submission was published in Your Two Cents last week that criticized Tewksbury's Town Manager and Police Chief for allowing Wal-Mart to be open on Easter Sunday. The truth of the matter is that Wal-Mart did not seek, nor was it required to seek, permission from the town in order to be open for business on Easter Sunday. Also, contrary to the assertion made in the same submission, Wal-Marts in other Massachusetts towns were also open for business on Easter Sunday.

Opinions are welcome in Your Two Cents, but it is policy for the Town Crier to verify statements of fact, particularly when published anonymously. The Town Crier regrets that procedure was not followed to the letter in this isolated instance.

Congratulations on Paw Prints. It's great to see students working out the painful task of doing serious community work.

Wilmington

A big thumbs down to all of the cheap roadside signs announcing new store openings and sales - they clutter the roadside and are just as bad as litter. The excellent Wilmington DPW should devote a few hours each week to cleaning them up from the main streets and the town should ask the businesses to refrain from such practice.

The MMA, a non-profit and nonpartisan organization that brings municipal officials together to establish and advocate unified policies, ensures the effective delivery of services to community residents. The letter reads as follows:

"On behalf of the cities and towns of the Commonwealth, the Massachusetts Municipal Association extends our deep appreciation and thanks for your vote to adopt the Local Aid Resolution that passed the House on March 12th. Local government can only provide the essential services that residents and taxpayers demand and deserve when there is an effective working partnership between the state and all 351 communities. The Local Aid Resolution is a vital part of our partnership, and your commitment to passing the resolution and providing early notification of basic local aid levels will allow localities to plan and act on their own budgets with greater certainty during a very difficult year."

The letter continues, "We applaud your vote, and the actions of Speaker DiMasi, Chairman DeLeo, and all members of the House, for embracing the full $223 million Chapter 70 increase, protecting the full $935 million Lottery distribution and $380 million Additional Assistance account, and taking this action so early in the process. Municipal leaders are committed to working closely with you to strengthen the Massachusetts economy and ensure that both state and local government can address the many fiscal and budget challenges that are ahead. Again, we thank you very much for your vote in support of the Local Aid Resolution."

The letter, which Chairman Miceli was honored to receive, was signed by MMA's Executive Director, Geoff Beckwith.

Nancy Arleen Vokey

Owned and operated Countryside Antiques; formerly of Wilmington

YORK, ME - Nancy Arleen Vokey died peacefully on Monday, March 24, 2008 at York Hospital with her loving family at her bedside.

She was born September 2, 1931 in Philadelphia, Pa. and was raised with her four sisters on Morris St. in Everett Mass. As children, they enjoyed riding bikes and sledding together. Nancy was part of the youth group at Grace Episcopal Church in Everett. She sang in the church choir, where she met her future husband, Charles Vokey.

After they married they moved to Wilmington, Mass, where they raised their 3 children, David, Donna, and Denise. When their children were grown they moved to York, Maine, at first near their beloved Nubble Light, then to Beech Ridge Rd., where Nancy owned and operated Countryside Antiques until she retired. She could identify most any bird and would enjoy hours of watching them come to her feeders. She had a special love for her dogs. Nancy and Charlie enjoyed square dancing, and motorcycling together, especially riding the scenic Kancamangus Highway.

Nancy had a kind soul and a generous spirit, and she went out of her way to make everyone feel welcome and at ease. She always had a kind word to say, and she loved her family unconditionally. She accepted people as they are, and took nothing for granted.

Nancy was a woman of incredible strength, dignity and determination. She enjoyed family holidays and get-togethers, and would talk about each detail of a party for weeks afterwards. Nancy kept her quick wit and sense of humor to the very end.

Tracy MacNeil accepted into RIMES program

The family of Tracey MacNeil, an undergraduate student at Lesley University with a dual major of environmental sciences and education, is proud to announce that she has been accepted into the RIMES program. The RIMES Program is funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation under the Undergraduate Mentoring in Environmental Biology (UMEB) Program (Grant Number IBN 0208517).

The RIMES program, which stands for Research Integrating Molecular and Environmental Sciences, was developed by Bruce A. Jackson, PhD, at UMass Lowell. The goal of the RIMES program is to markedly increase the number of under-represented minorities and women investigators in the environmental sciences. To achieve this objective, the program has established a far-reaching, international, environmental research effort for undergraduates to restore the ecosystem of Montserrat, a small island within the British West Indies, from the effects of the Soufriere Hills Volcano. In addition, an international, K-12 component fosters the development of research-based science curriculums for students during their formative primary school years. Tracey will be making her first trip to Montserrat in June with other scholars and members of the research team. She will be studying the volcano and the habitat as it relates to the indicator "mountain chicken" species, a rare type of reptile frog whose existence indicates changes in the ecosystem.

In complement to her studies, Tracey is employed by the city of Cambridge, MA, within the Human Services department. She currently works within the elementary schools, designing and teaching environmental education curriculum to K-5 students.

Tracey resides in Wilmington with her family. She is lovingly supported by her husband, Bruce, and her three children, Jenn, Luke and Zachary.

Stephanie Parker is named to Boston College Dean's List

CHESTNUT HILL, MA - Stephanie Rose Parker of Wilmington received academic honors at Boston College by making the University's Dean's List for the 2007 fall semester.

A sophomore in the Honors Program at Boston College, Stephanie is majoring in English with a minor in environmental studies.

In addition to her academic studies, Ms. Parker is an active member of the Quality of Student Life Committee.

Founded by the Society of Jesus in 1863, Boston College is one of the largest Catholic universities in the United States, with an enrollment of approximately 14,500 undergraduate and graduate students drawn from all 50 states and approximately 90 countries. Its faculty of eminent scholars is dedicated to teaching, both at the undergraduate level and in its nationally noted graduate programs in education, law, management, nursing and social work.

Though it has grown in size, stature and diversity, Boston College remains focused on its founding Jesuit mission to offer students a transforming educational experience: to help them develop both their intellect and their character and to encourage them to lead lives of faith, integrity and service to others.

Ryan Petrie honored at Liberty University

Lynchburg, VA - Liberty University student Ryan Petrie, of Wilmington, has been named to the Dean's List for the Fall 2007 semester. To receive Dean's List commendation, full-time students must earn a cumulative grade point average of 3.50 or above on a four-point scale.

Serving over 35,000 students, Liberty University is the world's largest evangelical university and offers programs in the arts, sciences, religion, education, business, government, law, communications, computer engineering & technology, music and theater. Additional information about Liberty's exceptional academic programs can be found at www.liberty.edu.

Tucker earns perfect score for work on environment

BOSTON - The Massachusetts Audubon Society recently announced that Senator Sue Tucker (D-Andover) received a perfect score of 100% on its 2007 Legislative Report Card for her support of issues that protect the environment.

Long regarded as one of the strongest voices on behalf of environmental issues in the Legislature, Tucker said she is honored to stand among those who recognize that clean water, clean air, and the reduction of toxic elements are fundamental to our environment.

"I am pleased to receive such an honor," said Tucker. "The health of our communities depends so much upon the health of our environment, so these issues will always be among my highest priorities."

Mortgages the Community Bank Way

We in the banking industry know very well that the subprime mortgage crisis is real. But here at Reading Co-operative Bank, we never offered subprime mortgages, so we were not financially impacted like so many big regional and national banks. As a result, there has been no slow down or restriction on our ability to loan, and we even welcome jumbo loans. Reading Co-operative Bank has always offered straightforward mortgage options, and we continue to offer them today to any qualified borrower interested in buying or refinancing a home in our community.

At Reading Co-operative Bank, our loan officers don't earn a commission when they close a mortgage deal. They're looking to help you finance or refinance your home with a mortgage you can afford. After all, isn't that what a knowledgeable advisor should do? Another important difference is that we don't sell our mortgages to Wall Street. Instead, Reading Co-operative Bank does it the Community Bank Way—we lend our own money, and we keep every mortgage right here on our own books. We're in it for the long term.

Before there were large corporate banks, Americans banked in their community with bankers they knew at an institution they trusted. That's the way we've done business since 1886. And those days are still alive and well here at Reading Co-operative Bank. Come in and talk to us if you have questions about your current financial situation or if you're interested in finding the best mortgage for you. Our door is always open.

Yours truly,

Julieann M. Thurlow

Wilmington Reunion in Florida draws 80

Friday, March 14th, it showed all day, but by 10:30 Saturday morning when Wilmington folks started coming to Fred Howard Park for the reunion, the sun was shining and the temperature had reached about 80 degrees. A day to do the Tarpon Springs Chamber of Commerce proud. About 80 Wilmingtonites enjoyed the warm sun - a welcomed change from the cool temperatures of last year.

The Pellerin's idea of bringing food to share is catching on. Not only did they bring their delicious strawberry shortcake, but Juanita Kim and Michael Rosa brought Sloppy Joe's and Rosmarie Enos Finch was passing out a variety of doughnuts.

In the afternoon Willie Whalen played his guitar for everyone. Among those present: Ted and Beth Wicks, M. Louise (Wicks) Perkins, Irene (Wicks) Saunders, Lester and Ellen Smith, Richard and Zenaida Pellerin, Jim Burke, Rosemarie (Enos) Finch

Mary (Wicks) Doherty, Frank and Joanne Corvino, Edward and Rosa Sadowski, Alice and John Murphy, Liz and Mike Shelley, Patty Griffin, Frank Griffin, Thelma (Murray) Diels, Ginger (Shine) Bosma, Lorrie Plouffe, Wendy Hartford, Sharon (Hembree) Boyer, Dodie (Murray) Bragdon, Fern and Jim Boudreau, Gene and Beverly DesRoches, Mike and Nita Rosa, Dick and Jean Cole, Jane and Jim Davidson, Joan Lanzillo, John Melvin, Sonny Melvin, Adele Passmore, John and Maria Riley, Dora Ardolino, Elaine (Peterson) Brisard, Harlan and Wendy (Wicks), VanDeslout, Jack and Nancy (Wicks)

ters and set the stage for the action that was about to take place. These narrators included eighth graders Taylor Brooks and Dan Fitzgerald and seventh grade students Erik Alatalo, Katie MacDougall, and Katelyn Richardson.

Viewers were immediately drawn into the action as they witness the first accidental meeting of Jasmine, portrayed by eighth grader Lauren Azevedo and Aladdin, seventh grader Angelo Morlani. A simple set of blue and yellow awnings was quickly transformed into a bustling town marketplace thanks to the use of simple props and terrific choreography of the ensemble.

Co-Director Julie Kelley explained that her cast is working with a script from Broadway Junior, a company that specializes in productions for middle schools. According to their website, "Broadway Junior adapts classic and contemporary musicals into 70 minute editions perfect for middle school-aged performers."

Only minor changes, according to Kelley, were required to accommodate the Wilmington Middle School cast. For example, the role of Jafar was cast as a female - eighth grader Courtney Cavanaugh - so some minor dialogue changes were made.

Kelley thanked Rachel DiGregorio for her choreography, and she thanked high school students Nathan Harvey (sound) and Frank Stevens and Lindsay Clark (spotlights) for their efforts in the production. Rounding out the production staff are Barbara Mette on lights, Steve Nahlik on bass and Ryan Phelps on drums.

"We like to have a musical every year, it's such a wonderful experience for the students, but it's not always possible," said Kelley. They performed "School House Rock Live" last year, and Kelley hopes to continue with other productions in the future. Other past productions include "Music Man," "Once on this Island, Jr." and "Annie, Jr."

"We are so proud of all the students," said Kelley. "It takes a lot of effort and dedication on the students' part, with all of our rehearsals and keeping up with their schoolwork and homework, they have all done a wonderful job."

Performances will take place on Thursday, March 27, and Friday, March 28, at 7:00 p.m. in the Middle School Auditorium. As of Tuesday morning Kelley said they are "very close to sold out for both performances." She encouraged anyone interested in tickets to call the Middle School main office (978-694-6080) for more information.

police were called, the suspect attempted to confuse the cashier and offered a second $100 bill. As the manager started to slowly count out the money the suspect became impatient, stormed out of the store, and jumped into the passenger side of a vehicle waiting at the curb. The car fled south on Route 38.

Seconds later, Wilmington Police Sgt. David Axelrod observed the suspect vehicle pass him near Clark Street. As he turned around and caught up to the vehicle in the center of town, the suspect-passenger jumped out of the car and fled on foot down the railroad tracks into the parking lot behind the old Sweetheart Plastics building. As Officer

Eric Palmer and K-9 Kimo approached the scene Sgt. Axelrod directed them to the area where the suspect was last seen in the parking lot. Less than a minute later the suspect was in custody. Fortunately he did not attempt to run from the K-9.

After being placed into custody it was determined that the suspect, Richard Manna, 48, of Merrimack, NH, had five outstanding warrants in Massachusetts and one in New Hampshire for similar related activity. Wilmington Police have charged him with an Attempt to Commit Larceny. He is currently being held at the Cambridge Jail.

or suffer the water from such building to discharge of forcibly discharge upon or flow across the surface of the sidewalk or street adjacent to such building, or abutting properties."

With rain in the forecast again for the coming week, Lieutenant Joseph Desmond of the Wilmington Police Department said he understands the issue for residents.

"We sympathize with people," Desmond said, "but there has to be some other way than putting the water in the streets or in a neighbor's yard."

The maximum fine that can be imposed upon a by-law violation is $300, but money is not the heart of the matter.

"The issue is that in times when it is icing it can cause an unsafe condition," said Desmond. He noted that although we are now seeing warmer days, temperatures still drop below freezing during the nighttime hours. Aside from freezing conditions, Desmond stated that large volumes of water put into the streets could pose danger to passing cars or pedestrians in a variety of ways.

Desmond noted that in a true emergency situation, such as when deep water in a basement threatens a heating system, residents may contact the fire department for assistance. In other situations, that do not require emergency services, residents are encouraged to be mindful of where they are putting the water being pumped from their home or yard.

Living in Boston, she was witness to the events leading up to the Revolutionary War. In 1768, she published a poem praising King George III for repealing the Stamp Act. While most of her poems were on a religious theme, some expressed support for the American cause. One poem was in praise of George Washington. She received a letter of thanks from Washington, and an invitation to visit him in Cambridge, which she did.

Mrs. Susannah Wheatley was a follower of Rev. George Whitefield, a prominent evangelical preacher. There is a story that Rev. Whitefield preached in Wilmington, under an elm tree, after Rev. Isaac Morrill, the Puritan minister would not allow him to use the church. A depiction of that tree is the center of the town seal. When Rev. Whitefield died in 1770, Phillis wrote a poem in elegy. This poem was widely published and led to an invitation to her from Countess Selina of Huntington, to join her in England and assist in the publication of her poems.

Before long, Phillis Wheatley was a sensation in London as well as Boston. Among her admirers was the French philosopher Voltaire.

Her success was met with skepticism by some who believed that people of her race were incapable of intellectual activity. One of the skeptics was Thomas Jefferson. This skepticism, though, is viewed in positive terms by Harvard Professor Henry Louis Gates, Jr., for it put the subject of literacy in blacks on the table. Gates authored The Trials of Phillis Wheatley.

An examination was arranged, and in 1772, Phillis sat down with 18 intellectuals, including John Hancock and Governor Thomas Hutchinson. They provided her with certification that she was indeed the author of the poetry.

Even in the modern era, her writing has generated a certain amount of controversy. Gates writes that many blacks in the 1960s criticized her for accepting a negative view of the blacks' condition. Gates quotes Vernon Loggins, who wrote that Wheatley's poetry reflects "her instinct for hearing the music of words" rather than understanding their meaning, "an instinct," he concluded, "which is racial."

The publication of her work enabled her to purchase her freedom on Oct. 18, 1773. Ironically, she continued as a personal servant to the Wheatleys.

She married a black grocer, John Peters, and they moved to Wilmington in 1778. There are no records indicating exactly where she lived, but the town is mentioned in some biographies. They remained in Wilmington less than one year, and separated. They had three children, none of whom survived.

Wilmington, in the town meeting of 1777, voted to extend freedom to any black persons who had been granted freedom by their masters. Whether this brought them to Wilmington is not known.

She returned to Boston and went back with the Wheatleys as a paid servant. She died in 1784.

Wheatley published a second book of poems, which was lost, though some of the poems survive.

Potential business stymied

Neighborhood Wine Shop' for 2007," Beraldi said. "And that was done entirely on consumer voting. To be awarded that is truly a testament to our inventory and, most importantly, our customer service."

The Beraldi's have been in business for seven years now and have been actively pursuing a second location for the better part of the last two years. When an acquisition of a previously existing business fell through last fall they started thinking about building their own shop from the ground up. While scouting locations, they decided it made the most sense to start it here in their own hometown.

"We are actively involved in the community in Beacon Hill - so we would want to be involved here in town business groups as well! With our children going through the school systems and sporting groups, we want to be involved in the community by doing things like sponsoring sports teams and just being firmly embedded in the town," said Beraldi.

With only 400-square feet of retail space on Beacon Hill, they are packed with the most interesting and unique wines, spirits and eclectic beer available on the market.

"We are the 6th wine and spirits store in a one commercial block radius - and truthfully, we do not feel the impact of competition. We're just THAT different," said Beraldi.

While it is a liquor store in regard to product in general and licensing - they don't consider it to be a package store, by any stretch.

"Wilmington has five package stores," said Beraldi. "We want to bring a specialty shop, and one that is entirely owner-operated, to the town."

The Beraldi's appeared before the Board of Selectmen on March 11 with hopes of trying to find a way to bring an additional retail package liquor license to the town. They spoke about their business and their failed attempts to purchase an existing business.

Wilmington Town Manager Michael Caira explained that the town is limited to five package store licenses and all five are in use right now. The number of package store licenses in a town is controlled by a State formula based upon population. At present Wilmington qualifies only for the five licenses already in use.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis explained that several ways exist for this to work for the new business, but most involve getting on the warrant of a town meeting. Unfortunately, the same night the Beraldi's appeared before the Selectmen, the warrant for the upcoming town meeting was closed.

A second approach would be a Home Rule Petition, but DeRensis cautioned that home rule petitions never represent a quick process. It would still require a vote of Town Meeting, and when all is said and done, if a new license is permitted, it would not have a specific name attached to it and others might apply.

They could also start fresh and look for a beer and wine license, but again they would probably have to wait for a Town Meeting. Several selectmen expressed concern that this particular avenue appeared to be similar to last year's unsuccessful statewide effort to allow beer and wine sales in supermarkets, convenience stores, and any store selling food.

"The people spoke a year ago," said Selectman Michael McCoy.

The Beraldi's conceded that they had voted 'no' on that bill when it came up last year and are still not in favor of convenience stores being able to sell alcohol, but they contend that their endeavor is a unique business, with their particular brand of hands-on ownership, delivery service, and no eat-in food.

"We can totally respect and understand where the Board (of Selectmen) is coming from," Beraldi said. "If nothing else, we want to make the community aware that we want to bring something special to town."

Members of the North Eastern Massachusetts Law Enforcement Council (NEMLEC) Dive Team conducted training exercises at Silver Lake on Wednesday. Spreading the News at Wilmington Middle School

From our Wilmington Middle School Correspondent...

By AMANDA RICHARDS

WILMINGTON - Lights, camera, action! The Wilmington Middle School television studio is on the air showing the morning announcements, presentations on school activities and offering the students an opportunity to wish their friends a happy birthday on air. "We provide a lot of great services," said Carol Trulli, a computer literacy teacher at the Wilmington Middle School who helps to direct the studio. "We keep students and staff informed about school related activities throughout the school year."

Trulli has much experience running the computers and electronics that are in the television studio. She started her teaching career after receiving a Bachelor of Science in Business Education degree from Salem State and her Masters in Education in Instructional Technology from Leslie University.

"When the Wilmington Middle School opened," offered Trulli, "I was so intrigued with all the equipment that was in the school's television studio that I wanted to help the students learn all about the technology." Trulli has been one of the directors since the studio first began broadcasting.

The morning newscast is seen by approximately 1,000 students and staff every day. The newscast includes the Pledge of Allegiance, a moment of silence, the extending of birthday wishes and a reading of the daily notices, upcoming events and the lunch menu. Besides the newscast, the television studio runs a scrolling events calendar. The studio staff keeps students informed about town activities provided by the Wilmington Memorial Library and the Recreation Department, also. Trulli said, "We try to make the television broadcasts cover a lot of different information that is of importance to the school staff and students." Trulli doesn't run this studio all on her own; she has the help of a team.

These people consist of

Brenda Lomanno, who is the Technology Integration Specialist at the Wilmington Middle School and a team of students including Robbie Sacks, Caleigh Buckley, Pat

MacCorkle, Ling Zhong, Jessica Weeden, Bobby Brabant, Andrew Baker and Erica Mullaney. "This is a wonderful group of kids. We are a close, tight-knit bunch," claimed Trulli.

The television studio has become an important educational tool in the Wilmington Middle School community. "The television studio is an awesome experience for the students. They are learning skills that will help them in life. I look forward to every broadcast," said Trulli.

Amanda Richards is a sixth grader in Discovery House at the Wilmington Middle School. Amanda is the latest student to take advantage of a Town Crier correspondence program initiated by Wilmington Middle School teacher Michael Mahoney and enthusiastically agreed to by the Town Crier. This program allows students the opportunity to have their news articles published in the newspaper. We look forward to bringing our readers installments of the series, in which Wilmington students in the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades will report on the news of the day. Students interested in participating are encouraged to contact Mr. Mahoney in Room 125.

Wilmington Middle School's Carol Trulli keeps the action moving in the studio and on the screen.

Premium Meats For Every Occasion

Sports Correspondents Mike Ippolito and Mike Giannattasio debate the fate of the 2008 Boston Red Sox.

GIANNATTASIO: Mike, I don't know what you think, but there is no way the Red Sox are going to repeat as defending world champions this season. As much as I love the Red Sox, even a die-hard fan has to know that the cards are stacked against them.

If you look at the statistics of world champion teams trying to repeat the next year, it's obvious that the history of teams trying to win consecutive championships does not happen very often. In 2004, for example, when the Red Sox won their first championship in 86 years, they were eliminated by the Chicago White Sox in the first round of the playoffs the next season.

Furthermore, as history has dictated since 2000, no baseball team has repeated as world champions. Don't get me wrong Mike; the Red Sox will be a very good team this year, but I can't see them winning it all.

IPPOLITO: While I would agree with you that repeating will be no easy task and recent history certainly bears that out, I would contend that rarely in recent memory has a defending champion been so equipped to defend their title as these Red Sox are.

Yes, they lose Schilling for much of the season, but other than that they return a quality pitching staff led by Cy Young favorite and post season hero Josh Beckett. And Schilling missing most of the year could actually pay dividends down the stretch and into the playoffs. Along with the solid starters they also return one of the few sure things in sports in ace closer Jonathan Papelbon.

This is a team built to win in the post season, and I am very confident they will qualify for the playoffs and prove it in October.

GIANNATTASIO: Mike, how can you say the Red Sox are built to win in the postseason when they did not sign any free agents or make any moves in the off season to strengthen their team? Yes, backup first baseman Sean Casey was a good pick-up, but other than that, the Red Sox are virtually the same team that needed seven games to beat the Indians in the ALCS last year.

Although I agree that the Red Sox will qualify for the playoffs, I think there are too many teams in the American League now that will give them problems. Look at the moves the Detroit Tigers and Los Angeles Angels made.

With all these recent moves, these teams have gotten stronger while the Red Sox have not gone above and beyond expectations. I don't know about you Mike, but my bet is that Jordan's Furniture will not be giving out free furniture this year.

IPPOLITO: I would agree that the Tigers certainly went out and improved themselves quite a bit in the off season and they will provide quite a challenge for the Sox if they were to meet in the post season, but I am not even sure that Detroit will make the playoffs with the sorry state of their bullpen. I mean, seriously, Todd Jones is their closer! And yes, this is virtually the same Sox team that WON the World Series. I will take my chances with a post season tested group against any of their competitors.

And speaking of a powerful lineup, the Red Sox certainly do not appear to be lacking in that department with Big Papi and Manny leading the way, along with Jacoby Ellsbury in place of the dead weight that was Coco Crisp.

Even with their shortcomings the Sox were able to win it all last year and I see no reason why they cannot do it again, although it will not be easy. I wish I knew Jordan's was running their promotion again. I would have furnished every room in my house.

GIANNATTASIO: In fact, Jordan's Furniture is running the promotion again, but don't get too comfortable on that recliner Mike, because the Sox have to sweep the World Series for the customers to get it for free this time. Although I agree that the Sox did overcome many obstacles to win the World Series trophy last year, the competition from other teams will take its toll on them this year. Every team in the entire league will be out to get them because they are the defending champions, and the wear and tear of being a beaten up team is another reason why they will not make a run at a championship.

Like I stated earlier, trying to repeat twice in a row is no easy task. In their long history as a team, the Red Sox have not won back to back championships since 1915-1916. In the last 45 years, only five teams have won back to back championships in baseball. The odds aren't looking too good for you and your free furniture, or the Red Sox Mike.

IPPOLITO: Yes, the Sox have not repeated since 1915-1916, but since 1918, they have had only one other opportunity to repeat and that was the disaster of 2005. I just don't see that happening to them again.

I think the Sox will wrap up a playoff spot with at least a week remaining in the regular season. OK, I am not so sure about a sweep of the World Series. The new dining room set might have to wait. But one thing I am sure of is that the Sox will make it two in a row. Make room for another banner!

Shawsheen Tech Boys Hoop

Coach Hodnett picks up post-season award

By MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

It was a remarkable season for the Shawsheen Tech boys basketball team, winning the Commonwealth Athletic Conference Large School championship in their first year in the league and winning their first ever State Vocational championship.

Recently, the man who led the Rams to these great achievements was honored for his role in the team's success, as head coach Bob Hodnett was named Division 3 North Coach of the Year by the Massachusetts State Coaches Association. The award is just the latest in a string of awards for the Tewksbury resident and third year coach of the Rams.

Earlier this off season he was named the CAC Large School Coach of the Year after leading the Rams to an 11-3 record within the loop as part of a 17-6 overall mark. It was the second consecutive CAC honor for Hodnett, who last year was the CAC Small School Coach of the Year after leading the Rams to the Small School title.

Despite all of his great success, Hodnett was still taken aback when he received the call from Burlington head coach Nick Pappas notifying him of the award.

"It was a big surprise because there are so many great coaches in Division 3 North, like Jim McCune from Wilmington and many others," Hodnett said. "It's just a great honor to be chosen for this award among so many great coaches."

While Hodnett may have been surprised, those closest to him were not surprised at all, feeling that he was very deserving after the tremendous job he has done, not just this season, but for his entire career as a head coach at Shawsheen.

"Bob is absolutely very deserving of this award," Shawsheen assistant coach Greg Bendel said. "He has certainly paid his dues. He came up through the ranks and was an assistant coach for 11 years."

Hodnett, who graduated from Shawsheen in 1989 after a stellar career for the Rams, returned to the Tech as an assistant under Roger Bourgeois in 1995. After working under Bourgeois for eight years, he continued as an assistant under former Shawsheen athletic director Ron Nowakowski when Nowakowski took over as head coach of the Rams.

When it came time to replace Nowakowski upon his retirement, new athletic director Al Costabile wasted little time in hiring the assistant who had served the Rams so well. Three years later, Costabile has seen the results that Hodnett has produced and could not be more pleased with the job he has done for the Rams.

"Bob has done a great job as far as his organization of the program," Costabile said. "I am very proud of what he has done. I really felt the basketball program stepped up this year, not only as a contender in the CAC Large, but also winning it in their first year. Bob has a great staff and they provide a great message and I am very proud of the way his players respond to him."

When Hodnett took over the program three years ago the Rams were loaded with young and raw sophomore talent, including Wilmington's Joe Gore and Tewksbury's Tommy Joyce and Joe Killion among others. In that first year he guided the Rams to a 7-13 record, which actually earned them a spot in the Division 3 Tournament due to a second place finish in the CAC Small.

Things only got better from there, after a 13-7 record and league championship last year, and of course all of this year's tremendous accomplishments. Hodnett knew he had a talented group of players when he took over the Rams and he credits the players with buying into the team philosophy to help them be such a success.

"We tried to instill a system with them and work on the fundamentals," Hodnett said. "We play as a team and everybody has their own part. Some will score, while others will rebound and others will be counted on for defense. Everybody did that. They were very unselfish. Nobody complained and they all bought into the team concept."

Of course as his team matured and got better, Hodnett matured as a coach right along with them, giving more responsibility to them, and finally this season seeing the full maturation of a senior class that gave Rams fans a season to remember.

"As they got better we were able to do more things with them," Hodnett said. "We gave them a little more freedom, as they learned to go out and create on their own. They are basketball players, not robots and we wanted them to be the best they could be."

According to Bendel, Hodnett was directly responsible for the gradual improvement in his team, as well as the tremendous leap to the next level this season.

"Bob had everything to do with it," Bendel said. "It was his idea to move up the Large because he thought it would be better for the program to face better competition. This did not happen overnight. He has had kids like Gore and Joyce for three years and he has done a great job with them. He put in his offense and he got the players to all buy into what he was doing."

Bendel, a 2002 Shawsheen graduate, knows what knows what it is like to learn from Hodnett on the basketball court, having played for him on the freshmen team when couple of weeks ago, bringing back many Shawsheen stars from the past in an effort to raise money for the program to allow Shawsheen players to attend Summer camps and fine tune their skills.

"It was a big success, and was a lot of fun," Hodnett said. "I hope it is something that will continue to expand. I thought it would be a great way to give back to the program."

Bendel says that the tremendous response both in participants and spectators was a credit to the relationships Hodnett has built over his career as both an assistant and a head coach.

"That was a huge testament to Bob," Bendel said. "All those

Hodnett was the head coach with that squad and continuing under his guidance when he was an assistant with the varsity squad. He continues to learn from Hodnett while serving as his assistant.

"I am still learning from him every day with the way the way he handles himself as coach of this team," Bendel said. "He does not have to do this. He has a great job as a firefighter in Somerville, but he gives up his time every day to spend time with and coach these kids because he loves doing it. For me, it is very easy to work with him, and it is great to see the compassion he has for the players and the passion he has for the game."

Hodnett has also begun to make an effort to grow the Shawsheen basketball program by getting former players involved, starting with his First Annual Alumni Basketball Game which he organized a guys came back for Bob. All of the guys, including myself played for him as a head coach or an assistant coach, and have a tremendous amount of respect for him."

That respect will likely continue to grow next season when Hodnett is faced with a new challenge after losing numerous seniors off of this year's squad. It will likely be a rebuilding year for the Rams, but it is a challenge that Hodnett is looking forward to.

"That's what it's all about," Hodnett said. "We want to teach the kids. It is a learning process and in a lot of ways we will get starting from square one again because we will be young again. Hopefully some of the older kids will step up, and we will have a good season."

If Hodnett's history is any indication, it will likely be a very good season for the Rams once again.

Many reasons to like golf

Town Crier subscriber Gene Ungvarsky of Wilmington will be writing a golf column here in the Town Crier Sports Pages during the golf season. Here's his debut column.

By GENE UNGVARSKY

With Spring finally here for many of us our thoughts now turn to all the outdoor activities we enjoy doing with our family and friends. If it just so happens that you're not certain what to do in your spare time I'd like for you to consider pursuing the wonderful game of golf.

Why golf you may ask - well, let me respond by asking you a question - what sport can be played equally well at the age of 8 or 88? How about Baseball?, Soccer?, Basketball?, Tennis? No, I don't think so.

The game of Golf has the unique ability to provide enjoyment and exercise to both the Young as well as the Young-At-Heart as witnessed by the numerous memorials you'll find on several of the premium golf courses throughout New England. "In honor of our beloved friend who on this day shot his age."

So, while it's important to give ourselves and especially our children the opportunity to experience all types of sports to see where it is that we may excel, one should consider the life time of returns that can be had from investing in the game of golf.

You see golf, unlike many sports, doesn't care about your size or speed or for that matter even your ability. Perhaps the best thing about golf stems from it being a game whose primary tenets are that of Integrity & Etiquette and as such golf is unmatched in its ability to instill life-long character-building values.

Still not persuaded to give golf a try, then I'd like to ask you one final question. What sport is it that most professional athletes, top executives, politicians, and celebrities prefer to play in their spare time? Yep, you guessed it - Golf!

So, as you consider outdoor activities for your family to participate in, consider the game of golf and discover for yourself why it is that so many love to play this game.

Over the next several weeks I'll be sharing with you a few thoughts on the game of golf which I hope you find as much helpful as you do entertaining along with highlights featuring the goings on at local facilities and events. Next week we'll focus on getting a proper start.

Spurr advances to states

Matt Spurr did a terrific job at the K of C Regional Free Throw Championships, recently held at the Coolidge School in Reading. Competing against 10 yr. old shooters, in six other Districts in the Northeast Region, Matt hit on 20 of 25 free throws but ended up in a tie with another shooter. No problem for Matt, as he calmly sank 5 of 5 extra free throws to win the competition. He now advances to the State Championships to be held at the Holy Cross College gym on Saturday April 5th.

Let's wish Matt Good Luck in the States!

Lack of sports fans a concern at TMHS

By MIKE GIANNATTASIO
Sports Correspondent

During the last several years, a decline in attendance of students attending Redmen home games has raised one question: Why are students not attending athletic events like they did in the past? It is obvious that students have a very busy schedule now with school, activities, work, and other priorities, but why has student support at TMHS boy's and girl's basketball games, soccer games, hockey games, and even football games and other sports suddenly decreased?

Vinny DePierro, a basketball and baseball player for the high school, attributes the lack of attendance by students to deficient improvements made to the sport's facilities.

"Tewksbury isn't known for having much success when it comes down to sports," said DePierro. "As far as increasing attendance, the school should definitely put lights on our football fields, as this will give students the opportunity to attend games on Friday nights. Most of the other schools surrounding Tewksbury have lights to play Friday night games, and their attendance seems to be much higher because of this."

"I also think the reasons students are not going to games might have something to do with our fields and stadiums. Our stadiums and fields are not top of the line at all. Our baseball field doesn't even have stands. The basketball gym is poorly lit, and it is in desperate need of a new floor."

While most students agree that inadequate updates to the school's gym and fields are reasons why attendance may have dropped, they also point it to a host of other problems.

Dave Robertson, a high jumper for the indoor and spring track teams, said that more announcements should be made so students are more aware of when the games are being played.

"Most of the time, the games aren't even announced unless they are major," said Robertson. "I'd say lack of knowledge by the attendees is a big issue to why attendance has dropped. It would be better if the office announced the games more often over the loudspeaker so students know when the games are."

Steve Levine, who has coached sports for 90 plus seasons and is presently the soccer, winter track, and spring track coach at TMHS, thinks that more students would go to games if they were not charged every time they attended.

"I think more kids would support their teams if everything wasn't so money oriented," said Levine. "Everything today is such a money making order and because of this, the kids always have to pay so many fees. If sport's teams at this school want to see more students in the bleachers or in the stands, then a school ID should allow all Tewksbury students into the games for no charge. I think a lot more people would go if this was the case."

Paul McDermott, who graduated from TMHS in 2005 and now is a junior at UMASS Lowell, agrees with Levine.

"I don't think students go to games anymore because they have to pay," said McDermott. "I think most students would go more if they could just walk in and show their student ID. Why go to the games if you have to pay, especially when you're just trying to root on your own school?"

Brian Aylward, the Tewksbury football coach at the high school, agrees with Levine and McDermott, but he thinks it would be great for the school if students get a discounted season pass so teams could use the money for extra needs throughout the season.

"If students could somehow buy a season pass that would allow them to go to all of the fall and winter sport's games, I think more people in general would attend," said Aylward. "The students would save money, but the school would be making a profit as well. The atmosphere would be much better at the games this way."

Although money is an important issue in student attendance, Levine also said that student support at TMHS is not where it once was. He said too many students in high school today don't respect each other.

"In this school, students talk each other down," said Levine. "I remember in the 80s and the 90s, the school here had so much spirit. The reason for this was simply because everybody supported everybody. The soccer players supported the football teams. The football teams supported the soccer teams and so on."

"On Saturday mornings, every team would be on the sidelines watching the football team. I would give my soccer players a practice off to go watch the field hockey games. We'd also go watch the cross country teams run during a practice."

"Everybody liked each other. Nobody was talking anybody down."

Jim Walker, the athletic trainer for the high school, said that not enough school pride is one of the major reasons students don't support each other.

"I think a lot of the student attendance problems has to do with school pride and spirit," he said.

Emily Boudreau, a soccer player at the high school, said that the students in the school don't have great attitudes.

"The attitude of this school is not good," said Boudreau. "I don't think students care about how their teams do anymore."

Students showing no support to each other can affect how the sport's teams at a school perform as well.

Anastasia Pappas, a field hockey and lacrosse player at the high school, thinks that athletes need fans at the games so they don't become unenthusiastic.

"Athletes get a little bit discouraged when there is only a limited amount of students at games," said Pappas. "When there is a larger crowd watching, I get much more excited and I play better."

Mike White, a cross-country, indoor track, and spring track athlete, said that having no fans watching meets or games can affect the athlete's eagerness to perform well.

"It definitely impacts athletes in terms of intensity," said White, who was recently named captain of the spring track team. "When people are cheering and screaming, athlete's adrenaline pumps and they perform better."

All in all, Levine said that the sport's teams at TMHS need to get more appreciation if people expect them to succeed.

"Student support is imperative in anything," said Levine. "Everybody likes to take pride that this is an athletic town, but if everyone is taking pride, where is everybody at the games?"

"The athletic program has to be encouraged in this town. There are more sports in this town than just football, and even they don't get the kind of support they used to get. And they should because they were a great team (this year)."

"I don't think sports and athletic education are treated with respect the way they were in the past."

Without a doubt, many people seem to agree that many changes are needed to be made if Tewksbury's sports teams want larger crowds at their games. As Levine said, everybody needs to support everybody if sport's teams want to succeed.

"It's called respect and everybody likes to get respect," he said.

Tewksbury Playoff games go down to the wire

Senior Semi-Finals

Sonics 28 vs. Raptors 18

In this Final Four playoff game the Raptors gave the Sonics a real run for it, but the Sonics were finally able to pull away at the end. The offense was spread out as usual with six Sonics scoring throughout the game. Lauren Teixeira led the way with 7 points followed by Jen Bowers (6), Liz Carie (5), Krista Petrone (4), Courtney Spinelli (4), and Katie Conklin (2).

The defense was led by Renee Conlin in the second and fourth quarters and Lauren Spencer in the first and third quarters. Both Renee and Lauren were named defensive players of the game. They were helped by Alyssa Guida and Stacy Matranga.

Scoring for the Raptors were Andrea Caprio and Paige Gumbrecht with 5 points each, Shannon Shikles with 4 points and Emily Fugate and Alyssa Kelly with 2 points each.

Blazers 27, Wizards 24

Scoring for the Blazers were Brooke Litwinsky with 7 points, Michelle Gavin and Stephanie Casino with 6 points each, Alyssa Guida with 4 pts., Kaylyn Michaud with 3 pts., and Francesca Pesantes with one point.

Scoring for the Wizards were Elizabeth Connolly with 7 points, Kimberly Fairweather with 5 points, Nicole Dunlevy and Christina Lusardi with 4 points each and Amanda Fleming and Nicole McColgan with 2 points a piece.

Senior Finals

Blazers 41, Sonics 33

Great team effort and all around great job by Michelle Gavin with 13 pts., Kaylyn Michaud with 11 pts., Stephanie Casino with 8 pts., Francesca Pesantes with 5 pts., and Brooke Litwinsky and Alyssa Martucci with 2 points each. Great win girls.

This final championship game started out real slow for the Sonics and by the half the Blazers were dominating with a commanding 14 point lead. The Sonics came out though with a lot of heart in the second half and actually closed it to within 5 points with 3 minutes left, but could not keep the engine going.

The scoring was once again shared by six Sonics with Lauren Teixeira leading the way with 8 points, Liz Carie and Krista Petrone with 6 each, Jen Bowers at 5, and Renee Conlin and Lauren Spencer with 4 apiece.

The defense was led by Alyssa Guida, named defensive player of the game, with help under the boards from Stacy Matranga and Katie Conklin.

Jr. League Semi-Finals

Lynx 26, Starzz 15

The Lynx withstood a strong Starzz comeback to pull away with a 26-15 March Madness semi-final victory. The fast breaking Lynx jumped out to an early lead engineered by the speedy backcourt duo of Amanda Brown and Ally Kelly. Both guards kept the pressure on throughout the game with their quick, slashing drives to the basket. They were helped by quick ball movement from the entire Lynx team initiated from strong rebounding by Toni Joy, Ashley Figucia and Kayla Berube.

The crowd was treated to some nifty behind the back, between the legs passing of Emily Veloso who led the team in assists. Shannon Smith was once again a steady force on the back line blocking numerous shots, pulling down multiple rebounds and providing an intimidating presence down low.

The defensive pressure applied by the Lynx team was lead by Delaney Chisolm and Andrea Morin who were named co-defensive players of the game. Both players chipped in with multiple steals and rebounds to round out a strong team effort.

The Starzz were within two point of the Lynx heading in to the final quarter of play but ran out of gas in the final frame. Scoring for the Starzz were All-star selections Loren Sullivan 5 points, Erin Henry 2 points, Eva Barinelli 1 point, Starzz rookie of the year Molly Robertson 1 point and playing her best game of the year leading the scoring Kenzie Wyatt with 6 points. Also playing well for the Starzz with tough defense were Amanda Aylward, Stefanie Deluca Gifford and Emily Duquette who was selected defensive player of the game.

Monarchs beat Mercury

Brittney Fletcher saved her best for last and played an outstanding game putting in the games first basket. Lindsay Cossar and Lauren Strong provided scoring also for the Mercury team and both hustled all over the court the entire game. Sandra Fleming and Karalyn Gallella both had outstanding years. Lisa Petrowski was finally contained by a tough defense, but still managed to block 8 shots and grab several rebounds.

Marina Russo, Nicki Santora and Ashley Collaruso all had many steals and dove all over the court. Hilary Fletcher had 9 rebounds and played well all year.

Junior Finals

Lynx 25, Monarchs 15

Nice game. Shannon Smith (7 points) followed with 5 seconds remaining with another offensive rebound and put-back to seal the victory. The Lynx were stymied all game trying to beat legendary coach Eric Braciskas' defense. The guard trio of Amanda Brown (7 points), Ally Kelly (6 points) and Emily Veloso were pressured and double-teamed all game but hung tough against the press.

Guards Ally Kelly and Emily Veloso did a nice job finding their forwards, Kayla Berube (6 points) and Shannon Smith down low. Amanda Brown was again "money" at the foul line hitting some key foul shots and facing some tough defensive pressure. The duo of Kayla Berube and Shannon Smith were immense in the final quarter controlling both the offense and defensive boards.

The Lynx never let the game get out of hand thanks to the strong all around play of teammates Andrea Dorin, Ashley Figucia and Delaney Chisolm. Great work by the entire Lynx team never giving up and working hard down to the final seconds of the job.

Intermediate Semi-Finals

Eagles 20 Tar Heels 15

great Tarheels team. Great defense was played by Brittney Pachucki, Marris Harrington and Nicole DePiero.

The Tar Heels lost to the Eagles 20-15 in a very competitive and exciting semifinal match-up. Alex Mecherkany played her heart out with 10 points, several blocked shots and a dominating performance on the boards. Jen Iannacci (3 pts) also dominated on the boards and played tough defense inside. Anna Piccolo (2 pts) and Abby Donoghue both showed a lot of hustle on both ends of the floor.

The Tar Heels defense was amazing holding the high powered Eagles to a season low 20 points. Julia Bodoni, Josie Saiz, Rachel Pendleton, Gabi Mecherkany and Michaela Swift all did an incredible job. Megan Sheppard unfortunately missed the game due to illness but she was a key contributor all season long.

Crusaders 23, Wolverines 19

The Lady Wolverines were ready for the semi-final round of the TGBL March Madness Tournament. They knew that the Crusaders were going to be a force to deal with in the semifinal round. The first three periods were close with both teams trading baskets and the lead. In the fourth quarter the Wolverines decided that if they were going forward to the championship game they had to reach down and find the strength to move their game up one notch to secure the victory. Defensive player for the Wolverines for the semi-finals was Chelsey Porcaro.

The Crusaders put up a hard fought battle against the Wolverines. At one point the Crusaders got out to a 13 to 6 lead but the Wolverines closed out the 3rd quarter with a 15 - 15 tie. The fourth quarter was owned by the Wolverines as they outscored the Crusaders 8 - 4 to win 23 - 19.

Meghan Sears led the Crusaders with 7 points. Other scorers included Kim Tecce, Shannon McLaughlin, Jillian Phaneuf and Lindsay Andella.

Championship Game

Wolverines 38, Eagles 31

The Eagles played against the Wolverines in a great game and battle for the championship. The score favored both teams during the game, but ultimately the Wolverines won in overtime. Scoring for the Eagles Nicole chaet 13 pts, Hannah Culwell 4 pts, Nicole DePiero 7 pts, Nicole Hammel 4 pts, Marris Harrington 1 pts and Brittney Pachucki 2 pts. Great defense was played by Krista Mignon and Mariah Culwell and Kaitlyn Fitzgerald grabbed multiple rebounds.

This game turned out to be a TGBL classic. The teams traded the lead numerous times during the first three quarters. The fourth quarter ignited the Eagles who quickly ran up a ten point lead with about 4 minutes to play. When the fourth quarter horn sounded the score ended up tied 30 to 30.

In the overtime period the Wolverines took control of the game. Led by the scoring of Stephanie Champoux, the ball handling of Shanell Nardone and Shana Chartienitz, the inside work of Chelsey Porcaro under the hoop and the hard work of all the other players on the floor, all contributed to a 38 to 31 victory for the Wolverines. Stephanie Champoux was named defensive player of the game.

Squirt 1's

The Tewksbury Squirt 1 team, sponsored by Pinnacle Construction and Jimbo's Famous Roastbeef & Seafood, playing their best hockey of the season were able to come away with two solid victories over the weekend against New Hampshire East and Dover.

On Saturday the Redmen played a strong offensive game against New Hampshire East. NHE got on the board first. Tewksbury quickly responded when Andrew Plourde made a great pass to Jessica Piracini who in turn passed it back to Dario Riparo who was on the point. Riparo passed then passed it across ice to Thomas McKenna who took a hard shot on net. Plourde was well positioned in front of the net for the rebound and slid the puck past the NHE goalie.

The second period started with another NHE goal. The Redmen's second goal came when Domenic Raneri stole the puck in our end and skated it up the ice. He made a beautiful fake causing the NHE goalie to his right and was then able to backhand it in with ease.

The next goal of the game came when the line of Nick Deveau, Brett Morris and Steve Hamel along with Raneri and McKenna took the ice. Raneri stole the puck and passed it to Hamel. Hamel made a sweet back pass to Brett Morris. Morris and Hamel passed it back and forth until Morris rifled a shot off the post. Hamel was able to get his stick on the rebound and drive it home for the goal.

The Redmen scored again when Sean Budryk had the puck behind the net and made a tape to tape pass to David Morley in front of the net. Morley fired the puck past the NHE goaltender to make the score 4-1.

Tewksbury scored to open the 3rd period when Piracini made a sweet pass to a well position Riparo in front of the net. Riparo rifled the puck into the net for the Redmen's fifth goal. NHE scored twice as the game was ending but Tewksbury held on for the 5-4 victory.

On Sunday Tewksbury played a great game against Dover coming away with a 5-2 victory. Dover got on the board first but didn't get the puck by Tewksbury goaltender Matt Pantanella and his defensive line of Tyler Harrington, Budryk, Plourde and Morris again until the third period. Pantanella had an outstanding game with 18 saves, many made under lots of pressure.

Tewksbury's first goal came with the line of Morley, Riparo and McKenna. Riparo had the initial shot on net and Morley quickly scooped up the rebound and fired it past the Dover goaltender. The Redmen scored again when Riparo had a strong shot on net from the right side. Raneri was in front of the net and got his stick on the rebound for a score.

The second period scoring frenzy started with the line of Tim Lafave, Connor Blair and Piracini. Lafave stole the puck and skated it up the ice with Blair right beside him. Lafave made a beautiful pass to Blair who ripped a top corner shot right past the Dover goalie. Tewksbury scored again when Hamel had the puck behind the Dover net and made a wrap around move and passed it for Raneri who fired it home.

The Redmen scored their fifth goal when Piracini won the faceoff and passed it back to Budryk on the point. Budryk made a great pass to Morris who skated it through traffic and rifled the puck over the shoulder of the Dover goalie. The only goal in the third period came from Dover making the final score 5-2.

The real friendships among men are so rare that when they occur, they are famous. (Clarence Day, This Simian World, 1920)

Baseball, fly fishing & everlasting friendships

Ted Williams

By James B. Goldsmith

As an early morning fog shrouds the inky black Miramachi River memories of a great fly fisherman rise like an Atlantic salmon to a dry fly. High up on the south bank of the river in Gray Rapids, New Brunswick, the roof line of the late Ted Williams's rustic ranch floats like a well presented dry fly. Here nestled among white birch and hardwoods we see a long wood staircase leading to the river and envision a 6'4" legend returning like the splendid Atlantic salmon to its ancestral home to spawn.

This is a story of one of professional baseball's greatest hitters, and one of the first fly fishermen to practice live release of the Atlantic salmon. However, baseball and fly fishing are only part of this story. The friendship between Williams and the Curtis family in nearby Blackville was as strong and deep as the Miramachi in full spring flood. It began in 1955 and lasted 38 years. Roy Curtis was Williams's guide and Edna Curtis, Roy's wife, was #9's cook and housekeeper. Meanwhile, Clarence Curtis took over as Ted's guide when his father died.

Clarence tagged along watching Williams and Roy fish, and can't remember when he didn't know Williams. Later Clarence's brother George Curtis, who Ted called "string bean" was 12 or 13 when he first met the man whose voice carried almost as far as his accurate, 100 foot casts.

With all the success and accomplishments this man had in baseball and on the water one sensed that he yearned for close personal relationships. At home in San Diego, California, his childhood was filled with missing parents and insecurity. As an adult baseball brought fame, money, status, plenty of boos and many standing ovations at Boston's Fenway Park, but what Williams really needed was a close friend.

He found more at Gray Rapids in 1955; a family where love and respect came up with the sun and rode on the wings of the majestic eagle. It didn't fade until sunset turns the river into a shimmering ribbon of silver.

Ted Williams
Found A Family
and Cause:

Conservation of the Atlantic salmon. "The Atlantic salmon is very, very special in my mind."

It's time to relax with a glass of rye whiskey and a good meal shared with the Curtises. Leigh Montville, author of Ted Williams, The Biography of An American Hero, says, "He became a perpetual spokesman for New Brunswick and the salmon."

He honeymooned with his second wife here. He came here with his third wife. He came here with the kids, John - Henry, and Claudia. He came here with Louise (Kaufman). This place was the longest running constant in his life."

The Miramachi River is as changeable as the late Ted Williams. A study in contrasts. The home pool gurgles in summer and lulls you to sleep, while nature's fall show paints the river and landscape a breathtaking canvas of crimson, yellow, orange and green. Soon winter's penetrating cold locks the river in its icy embrace. Williams's temper tantrums weren't so predictable. Stanley M. Donovan, Jr. a guide and building inspector in the Village of Doaktown likes to tell this story. The late Wallace Doak, owner of the famous W.W.Doak tackle shop in The Village of Doaktown, was a devout Christian who wouldn't tolerate swearing in his store. Donovan says, "Wallace told Ted Williams to go outside and cool off your tongue."

The late Roy Curtis was "Mr. Baseball," guide on the Miramachi River for 28 years until he died in 1988. Both men were ardent conservationists who practiced live release and both were inducted into the Miramachi Salmon Hall of Fame, Doaktown, New Brunswick. This honor recognized their devotion to live release and the many salmon they caught. Williams "hit" for the angling's triple crown in 1978 when he landed his 1,000th Atlantic salmon, 1,000th bonefish and 1,000th tarpon. Clarence Curtis was 36 when he became Williams's guide in 1989.

Clarence, of all the fly fishermen you have known how does Theodore Samuel Williams measure up as an ardent conservationist of the Atlantic salmon, fly fisherman and man? He says, "I really didn't get to know him good

Movie Reviews

by Paul Feely

"DRILLBIT TAYLOR"

"Drillbit Taylor" stars Owen Wilson as a homeless bum recruited to use his special forces training to protect three kids getting bullied at school. At best, there are a few laughs; but overall the movie is a real stinker.

"DRILLBIT TAYLOR"

GRADE: **

There's a line in "Drillbit Taylor" where two of the main characters argue the merits of "not being able to polish a turd." That line is very appropriate when considering this flick, which is a real stinker.

There's no can of air freshener big enough to make this sucker smell any prettier, as it joins a parade of bad movies this spring.

Owen Wilson stars in the title role as a homeless bum recruited to use his special forces training to protect three kids getting bullied at school.

Drillbit sees the kids as a cash cow, one that can pay for his first-class ticket to Canada where he plans to start his life over.

Wilson looks almost as bored making the movie as the audience that has to suffer through it.

Wilson's trademark slacker appeal doesn't help a movie that needs an actor capable of providing that adrenaline shot of charisma and excitement to make the material truly effective with his manic performance (i.e. a Jack Black or Will Ferrell.)

Director Steven Brill puts too much faith in Wilson and relies on him to carry the film instead of focusing on the children who are far more entertaining and better-developed characters.

The one thing they manage to get right is making the bullies such obnoxious jerks that you really want to see them suffer a little humiliation. Unfortunately, we don't even really get rewarded with a great payoff for enduring the agonizingly boring setup. Every so often there's a funny joke or cute moment, but they appear almost accidental.

"DOOMSDAY"

GRADE: **

There are so many movies these days that deal with the apocalypse, it has almost become an every-other-day occurrence.

This time around writer and director Neil Marshall has brought us Domsday, which looks and feels a lot like "The Road Warrior: Scotland Edition."

Rhona Mitra stars as Eden Sinclair, a tough soldier girl in England in 2035 who has been given an impossible mission (her favorite kind). Three decades ago, a deadly virus swept through Scotland, decimating the population and scaring the English government enough that they decided to wall off the entire northern part of the island. Although this solved the problem in the short term, the disease inevitably returns, this time in heavily populated London.

Having recently learned that there are still survivors living behind the wall, the government assumes that a cure must have been discovered, perhaps by the mysterious Dr. Kane (Malcolm McDowell). Eden and a squad of soldiers are sent into the long-abandoned hot zone to find this vaccine before the virus turns London into a ghost town.

"Domsday" is sloppy and silly, but if you walk in not expecting much, it's very entertaining. There's lots of explosions, bloodshed and hot gals and guys dressed in post-apocalyptic leather fashions. Mitra's tongue-in-cheek performance sets the tone for the film.

PLANS ALL COME TOGETHER

Fun and fund$ in Wilmington

"The guiding principles of 'Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity' have led the Wilmington Lodge of the Sons of Italy on a quest to improve the quality of life for the residents of Wilmington for more than 40 years now," notes the "Wilmington Town Crier."

"Their upcoming comedy night is just the most recent fundraising endeavor to benefit their many causes."

"On March 12, 1967, Laura Caira, Frances Gray and George Murray founded the Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli Lodge #2183 of Wilmington, MA. It emanated from a series of meetings at the Wilmington Skating Club. At the final meeting, a slate of officers was formulated and at the suggestion of Anna Visconti, the name Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli (Pope John XXIII) was adopted. Grand Venerable John Guarino and Grand Orator Aldo Caira conducted the installation and institution ceremonies."

"According to the website, there were 94 members at the time of the Lodge's founding. Today there are more than 170 active members in this 'mixed lodge' that includes both men and women."

"The Wilmington Sons of Italy has been recognized for many charitable contributions to the town. They have traditionally helped fund community needs that, while considered important, may not survive budget cuts...."

Corporate drivers: 'several questions' in Burlington

"The Planning Board had several questions, mostly centering on the proposed location of the building, as it voted unanimously to continue a public hearing on a special permit application from the Trammell Crow Co.," notes the Burlington edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"This application is related to Trammell Crow's Planned Development District (PDD) on Corporate Drive."

"Attorney Robert Buckley of the local firm of Riemer & Braunstein, representing Trammell Crow, told the planners the company is seeking a special permit to construct a fourth office building on the site."

"This would be one 107,000-square-foot building, Buckley said, a combination of the properties at 88 and 90 Cambridge St. (the latter being the former Epsilon building, which has closed)."

"This is a combination of the two lots," said Buckley. "Nothing has changed."

"An engineer representing Trammell Crow, Glen Doherty, told the Planning Board the curb cut to 90 Cambridge St. would be closed."

"The Trammell Crow site on Corporate Drive was the first PDD in town, approved in 1988 by Town Meeting. It consists of the Burlington Corporate Center (the office development) and the 75-unit Maple Ridge condominium complex."

"In 2000, Trammell Crow acquired the Epsilon building at 90 Cambridge St."

"Later that year, Town Meeting voted to amend the PDD to include the Epsilon building."

"Doherty told the planners that this will be known in the PDD as Building 100."

"There is one more to be built as part of the original agreement, Doherty stated, and that would be called Building 200...."

Market Watch in Woburn

"The Archdiocese of Towns to S-8

Boston intends to place a six-acre portion of the St. Anthony's Church property on the market, according to the local real estate firm owner brokering the deal," notes the Woburn edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"According to Stephen Braese, of Pleasant Street's Century 21 Crowley, the Archdiocese will begin soliciting bids from private developers for the subdivided church parcel."

"Although all offers will be entertained, church officials have reportedly stipulated that the buyer must purchase the land and designate it for a residential-only development."

"We're the listing agents for the Archdiocese of Boston and it's officially going on the market," Braese explained, during a phone interview. "There is no asking price. The Archdiocese just puts out a bidding process."

Movies

From S-2

"10,000 B.C." GRADE: **

"10,000 B.C." is a movie of extinct animals and even more out-of-date thinking.

If you believe the movie, sophisticated ships and velvet were invented long before we previously thought. Maybe toothbrushes as well, because everyone's teeth are gleaming in the sun.

"10,000 B.C." was obviously created with Mel Gibson's "Apocalypto" in mind, but it lacks the narrative drive and suspense of that film. What we're left with is impressive, special-effects action sequences mingled with too many inert dialogue scenes (the film's prehistoric characters speak a language that could be called Almost English).

If you saw "Apocalypto," you'll recognize the basics of the story: At the beginning, one tribe swoops in on another, taking a bunch of hostages and slaughtering others. The rest of the movie is one noble warrior's quest to save his people and get back to the kidnapped woman he loves.

There may be a love story in here somewhere, but the movie never bothers to establish that hero, D'Leh (Steven Strait), and blue-eyed cavewoman Evolet (Camilla Belle) are looking to make fire with each other

The mammoths look great, as do the gigantic, tree-climbing dodo bird/ostrich things. Toward the end, there are some battle scenes - in an ancient city dotted with enormous pyramids - that achieve a scale and grandeur few movies attempt these days.

Ted Williams

until 1989. To me there was nobody who cared about the salmon as he did. He kept maybe one grise a year, but no adult salmon. There's nobody I've ever met who was as concerned about the salmon as Ted was. And to keep them coming back."

Meanwhile, Clarence's brother, George Curtis, who owned Black Rapids Salmon Lodge, in nearby Blackville for 27 years tells us a story that reveals how ardent a conservationist Ted Williams was. The 12 year-old boy whom Ted called string bean has been a guide for 45 years. George says, "In the early 80's an outfitter from Blackville was caught taking his guests (sports) out fishing with a net at night. He was arrested when they found salmon in his kitchen sink. The magistrate fined him $500, and when Ted heard about it he said, "That judge should be hung. He didn't think the penalty was harsh enough". Curtis continues, "Ted was a very strong believer of playing a fish no longer than one minute for every pound." Williams believed if a sport played a salmon for a long time to exhaust this magnificent fish and to impress his friends that is bad. It stresses the fish."

To get a better perspective on what Ted Williams was like away from professional baseball where he put himself under continual pressure to become the best hitter ever, we turn to Clarence Curtis who knew Williams well.

Was he really as mean and rude as he has been portrayed by some sportswriters and authors? Clarence, who is proud that Williams once told him, "We are flawless as a team," says, "He wouldn't put people down, but he would get mad and swear. He was a kind-hearted man. Not too much different than anyone; some people have different opinions many who knew him liked him. People wanted to claim that they knew him. I'd say he wanted to fit in; he just wanted to be part of the place. (Gray Rapids).

"He was interested in meeting people on the river. He'd pick up a rod and look at the way they tied their knots and the type of flies they were using. He taught me how to tie flies. On a scale of 1-10 I'd rate him about a nine. They had to be perfect; fly, water, line, knots. He'd talk about it; what are you going to put on? He was a perfectionist. His favorite fly of all was the green butt bear hair. He had about four to five favorites; green machine, butterfly, cosseboom and red squirrel tail. He used a big bomber for a dry fly. The fly could be perfect, but he would ask me, "how can we make it better?" When he was playing baseball he'd lie in bed at night thinking about ways to improve his swing. The same is true of his approach to fly fishing."

Clarence, "What do you think Ted Williams's legacy was to the Atlantic salmon fishery, and has he passed it onto you and George?" The 175 pound, soft-spoken guide says, "I think so."

The whole thing for him was conservation. The salmon was everything to him-conservation. He was against anything that killed them; merganser ducks, offshore commercial fishermen."

Claudia Williams, one of Ted's daughters, came with her father several times to White Birch Lodge. Clarence picks up the story, "Claudia thought the ducks (which eat parr) were kind of cute. She didn't want him to shoot them." She was so upset she didn't speak to her dad for a few days, but as Clarence says, "he shot them when she wasn't here." The man who was very close to Williams, almost like a brother, continues, "He was loud, and sometimes he would say something as a joke, and people would take it the wrong way. He never was really bad to people, and I never once saw him refuse to sign his autograph. He'd always give something away-a fishing rod. One time a youngster lived across the river. The boy was on the north bank (opposite Ted's camp). We went across the river and Ted told him that if he would stop smoking he'd give him a fly rod-one of his own rods. He gave me three or four rods, waders, lines-he was always giving things away."

"Clarence, what made Ted Williams unique and memorable as a fly fisherman and man, and what did you admire most about him?" The man who now works for Joseph T. Walsh who purchased Ted Williams's White Birch Lodge and all his property in 2005 says, "One thing he could really cast; he knew how to play a salmon. I was the one with the landing net. You've got to work as a team. He was easy to work with. I remember he said one time, "we are flawless as a team. I still guide for the people who bought this camp as caretaker and guide." How can a man who had huge hands tie a number eight fly? He had 20-20 vision and his eye to hand coordination was unmatched. Moreover, he was patient and persistent and when he wasn't wading the river he was in the cellar at White Birch Lodge tying flies early in the morning before breakfast."

The third Curtis in Ted Williams life lives in a small, yellow bungalow high on the south bank of the Miramachi River in Blackville. Enter Edna Curtis, a small, spry lady who in a sense was the "mother" Ted Williams yearned for as a boy. Edna and Roy Montgomery Curtis raised 10 children, six boys and four girls, and in the process learned to manage a household and cook. In 1965 Williams dismissed his cook/housekeeper, and was looking for a replacement so he asked Roy if he knew anyone

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Honor a teacher (Reading)

"Each year, the Reading Technology and Education Foundation funds grants from teachers in Reading's seven public schools for technology that helps make learning innovative and exciting," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"To accomplish this, the Reading Technology and Education Foundation, Inc., depends on annual fundraisers like the recent Festival of Trees and also upon contributions from individuals, parents and businesses."

"This year, the Reading Tech Fund has received over $30,000 in teacher grant requests from four of Reading's public schools. Please help us meet our goal of raising $25,000 this year to support excellence, creativity and innovation in Reading public schools by contributing a tax-deductible donation in recognition or appreciation of any teacher, administrator, staff person, school or organization."

"With additional contributions, more grants will be funded. In 2006, the Reading Technology Fund received $70,000 in grant requests from seven Reading schools and was able to fund $20,000 of them."

who would do a good job. Roy asked Edna, but the night before she walked down that long gravel driveway to White Birch Lodge she was so nervous she didn't sleep a wink. For 28 years Ted had comfort, cleanliness, delicious meals and a loyal friend."

What was Edna's reaction when Montville reported in his biography, Ted Williams, "Edna, that's the best breakfast I ever had!"

Today, four decades later, Edna is in her livingroom with this writer, her son George and Paul Surette. She tells us, "I was happy he said it. He thought there was nobody like me. How he was so lucky to get

Full change ahead in Lynnfield

"Once again elementary school principals Jane Tremblay and Mary Beth Shea presented a united front before the School Committee to deliver a progress report on their schools' 2007-2008 improvement goals and briefly look ahead to the future," notes the "Lynnfield Villager."

"The two administrators presented first their joint goal of applying mastery learning to maximize student achievement in the core areas of reading, writing and mathematics."

"Summer Street's Tremblay called the goal a multi-year effort. The schools plan on seeking focused improvement in one area of study at a time."

"Working toward this goal, the administrators dedicated their professional development day to developing a shared vision of mastery between the schools."

"Present for the day was speaker Dr. Michael Wasta of the Lead and Learn Institute."

Wasta gave a presentation to teachers at both schools and recommended math as a starting point.

"A portion of the day was also spent with teachers from both schools meeting and working together to a cohesive transition between grade levels in math with the elementary schools and heading to the middle school."

"Mary Beth and I are at the point where we wanted to be at this time of the year," said Tremblay, speaking to the Committee's chairman, Dorothy Presser. "That's our goal, Dorothy, to by the end of the year be done with math."

"The administrators intend to continue to improve student achievement in math with upcoming development days and with collaborations between grade level teacher teams and Math/Science Curriculum Head Cindy Schott to improve interim assessments."

"The extension of this multi-year goal is currently the only preliminary goal developed by the administrators thus far...."

to S-8

me. I'm not saying I was that good of a cook, but he thought so."

Mrs. Curtis, Ted Williams was a very controversial man. A great professional baseball player and fisherman. What was he like at White Birch Lodge? The gracious lady replies, "I liked him. He thought the world of me and Roy. He liked all of us pretty well. He'd flare up and get over it. He was a dear old lad, Ted was. He loved lemon meringue pie and chocolate cream pie. His, John-Henry's and my birthdays were in August. He took me out to dinner. I'd bake a large chocolate cake every year for his birthday. He had an awful big heart, wasn't he George? Every fall when he went home he'd say, "The season isn't long enough. I can remember him going up that lane and he'd never look back."

Does George Curtis who met Williams 49 years ago ever think of the late Ted Williams? He tells us, "I think of him most the first two weeks of June when Ernie, James Underhill my brother-in-law, my father and I took plywood to the Swinging Bridge in Upper Blackville to make a shack. Roy took 40 ounces of rye (whiskey) and Ted had Canadian Club. Ted owned the rights to that water. My children, Tina and Kirby, who were teenagers in the early 80s, played with John-Henry and Claudia."

The mists of the Miramachi have evaporated giving fly fishermen a better view of White

Birch Lodge. #9's fishing clothing has been taken from a hook in his bedroom closet and packed away. But the rusty, green metal rocking chairs where Ted, Roy and Clarence had a glass of rye whiskey at day's end are still on the front porch. The livingroom walls are decorated with photographs of Ted Williams with famous sports icons including George Herman (Babe) Ruth.

Clarence's voice is as gentle as the late spring breeze coming off the river. It is soft and tinged with sadness as he sits at a long, varnished picnic table in Ted Williams's livingroom and tells us about the last time he saw his friend in 1993.

Clarence points to a place at the end of the table and says, "Ted was sitting right there having breakfast. John-Henry was there with him. He (Ted) was looking out across the river, and there were tears in his eyes. When we said goodbye, we hugged. It just seemed as though he knew he wasn't coming back. I felt sad. And my mother was here-she felt the same way. John Henry is gone now too. There will never be anyone like him again on the river." Ever has it been that love knows not its own depth until the hour of separation."

A window to total body health

Your next eye exam could tell a doctor a lot about your overall health.

A new eye exam technology known as the Optomap Retinal Exam does more than make annual eye exams easier and more convenient. This state-of-the-art retinal scanning technology provides a view into a person's eye health and overall health, making it easier to detect disorders from glaucoma to diabetes and certain cancers.

The retinal exam provides a wider view of the retina than the traditional retinal exam and arms optometrists and ophthalmologists with clinically useful information that can be critical in the early detection of eye disorders and diseases like glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy and age-related macular degeneration.

Retinal imaging can also help indicate evidence of non-eye or systemic diseases like diabetes, hypertension and certain cancers.

"Until the optomap Retinal Exam, traditional undilated eye examinations only took a one-dimensional look at the eye," said Dr. Mark Jacquot, O.D., Vice President of Eye-care for Pearle Vision, the first mass-market retailer in the nation to make this technology widely available.

"A retinal scanning exam provides professionals with a wider look at the inner workings of the eye with the simple click of a button. Plus, patients like it because it is non-invasive and though some situations may require a dilated exam, this exam typically does not; most patients can resume their daily activity immediately following the exam.

Having the exam is quick, safe and comfortable for patients of all ages, from infants to seniors.

Patients look into the optomap scanning device and with the click of a button, an ultrawide digital scan of the retina is instantaneously captured, covering approximately 82 percent of the retina, compared with the traditional undilated exam, which allows the doctor to see only 15 to 20 percent of the retina.

The patient's image is displayed on a computer monitor, allowing the eye care professional to review it quickly and interactively with the patient, and, if necessary, refer the patient to a retinal or other health care specialist.

MEDI offers new weight loss approach in Woburn

With doctor supervision, vitamins, supplements and body analysis, Woburn's new MEDI Weightloss is not the typical way to shed pounds.

The center's have enrolled more than 1200 "happy" patients since their April 14th 07 opening, said Kim Kaloust, Operations Manager of the Woburn center and one of the "happy" patients herself.

It is "the one that works," according to Kaloust and the company motto. The average patient loses four to 10 pounds the first week of the program, 20 pounds in the first month and two to five pounds each week thereafter.

"It's a fun job to see people's life change," Kaloust said.

MEDI is one of the fastest growing weight-loss centers in the country, Kaloust said.

When patients come into the center, they go through a three-phase process: an acute weight loss first, then a short-term maintenance phase, and lastly, a long-term maintenance phase to make sure the weight stays off.

"It's been phenomenal," Kaloust said. "It's a very safe, rapid and effective program."

In the first phase, patients visit with a nurse practitioner under the supervision of Dr. Jeanne Kilp, a leading OBGYN in the Boston metro area, who evaluates their needs through blood work, an electrocardiogram and a Tanita scale. When patients stand on the scale, it measures weight, their body mass index, water weight and basal metabolic rate. Patients come in twice a week for injections of B-6 and B-12 vitamins and for a visit with Kilp and her staff. They are prescribed a regimen of FDA-approved appetite suppressants, a colon cleanser and other vitamins.

The amount of injections and visits decreases as patients reach their weight goals.

Patients can come in before or after work, or on a lunch break, to receive injections, which takes, on average, no more than 15 minutes, Kaloust said.

"The waiting room is the happiest place next to Disneyland," Kaloust said jokingly, referring to patients who share their success stories with others.

In addition to the medical aspect, patients are counseled on effective ways to exercise and things to buy at the grocery store. Instead of telling patients what to eat and when, the program gives them a calorie limit and details the "real food" they should focus on, Kaloust said.

"The tools are all there and it's so easy," Kaloust said. "We have exercise guidelines, shopping lists and the meds we're using have been around since 1961. Common sense is the big factor."

In coming months, MEDI will be partnering with the Arsenal Mall sponsoring their Mall Walker Program aimed at providing an alternative way to exercise. They will also be sponsoring the Walk for Obesity campaign.

The cost of the program is $268 for the initial visit and $56 a week thereafter. However, there are spring specials running now please call your local center for information.

Dr. Kilp brought the centers to Massachusetts after seeing its results in Florida. There are currently 40 clinics nation-wide and 40 more in the works for this year. Along with Woburn there are locations in Watertown, Danvers, Chelmsford, and Salem.

To find a center near you visit MediWeightloss.com or call 1-877-MED-LOSS.

LANDSCAPE IN OIL DEMONSTRATION

A Landscape in Oil demonstration will be held at the Reading Art Association's April meeting on Wednesday, April 9 at 7:30 p.m. at Guild Hall, First congregational Church (middle side door), Sanborn Street in Reading.

Monique Sakellarios has been painting professionally for 24 years, having been schooled at the Leonardo DaVinci School of Art and the American University, both in Cairo, Egypt. She is an internationally recognized and collected impressionist artist.

She was awarded "Founders Award - Best of Show" by the National Oil and Acrylic Painters Society's Best of America competition in 2005. She has been honored as one of only approximately 130 Signature Members in the United States of both the Oil Painters of America and the NOAPS.

NOTES FROM S-4 'In awe' in North Reading

"Jennifer O'Leary, the town's first Youth Services Director, gave the Selectmen a status report on the many new youth programs underway since she came on board last October," notes the "North Reading Transcript."

"The Youth Service Department has a balanced budget in fiscal 2009, she said, representing no cost to the town. O'Leary's salary is funded through June 30, 2009 by the fundraising efforts of the NRYSSA, the North Reading Youth Services Support Association and the department's program costs will be covered by revenues from those programs.

"She said Youth Services is working closely with the town's Parks and Recreation Department as well as the police and school department. NRYSSA has started a Youth Group for middle and high school aged youth who act as the planning committee for social and recreational activities like the February and April school vacation trips and a Battle of the Bands and they're also planning a hike in the spring.

"NRYSSA is also working on meaningful community service opportunities for youth like collecting food for the North Shore's largest food bank, the Haven From Hunger in Peabody.

"In response to a question from Selectmen Joe Veno, O'Leary said her first task has been to build a relationship and trust with the town's youth through these kind of activities. 'It's difficult to talk about in public but there's definitely a social service aspect to it as well.'

"The Youth Services expense budget is projecting revenues of $23,000 next year, which should basically fund the office's costs outside of salary.

"Giles Norton of the Youth Services Committee said his group is 'basically in awe' of what O'Leary has accomplished so far and looking forward to what is coming...."

TOWNS FROM S-3

"The Archdiocese has requested it to be a residential use," the real estate broker emphasized. "So there will be no McDonald's or Burger King or any other retail use. There will be no office park or commercial use. I know people are concerned about that."

"The local Catholic parish, located in North Woburn nearby Route 128 and Elm Street's Stop & Shop, will remain untouched by the sale, as the church stands on a separate 7.25 acre parcel adjacent to the land to be sold.

"All proceeds from the sale will go directly back to St. Anthony's Church, instead of to the Boston Archdiocese as in similar sales of property.

"The city's Planning Board endorsed an ANR (approval not required) plan calling for the separation of the 13-acre church property into two lots.

"There was no discussion on the proposal, as the subdivision met all frontage and setback requirements, thus leaving no reason for the board not to endorse the plan...."

Local realtors complete professional real estate course

Colonial Manor Realty co-owners Bobbie Botticelli and Rick Nazzaro and agents Myrna Tichenor, Jane Watson, Diana Kaine, Alicia Botticelli-Tarasuk and Annette Marchant have all successfully completed the Loss Mitigation Certification Course (LMC) of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® held recently in Boston.

Due to the challenges facing many Realtors® today in representing a buyer or seller who is working in a transaction involving foreclosure, short sales, properties at auction or bank owned; this comprehensive course was developed to educate Realtors® on all the issues surrounding properties facing these complicated transactions.

The course is taught by national and local experts in loss mitigation and is designed to equip attendees with the tools needed to deal with short sales on both the buying and listing side; the process, ethics, laws, contracts and credit issues involved; and how to best approach lenders. Lastly, this course also addresses the human element of these transactions as consumers potentially face losing their homes.

Upon completion of the Loss Mitigation Certification Course, participants earn lifetime usage of the LMC logo and continuing education credits necessary for real estate license renewal.
